Author’s Bio

Dominic Cerrato, Ph.D., is an established author, editor, theologian, and former university professor with more than forty years of experience in writing, teaching, and public speaking. He is the author of several traditionally published nonfiction books, including works from Our Sunday Visitor, and the historical novel Battle in the Pacific. He has served as editor of a national magazine and has contributed extensively to various publications. Drawing upon his background in philosophy, theology, and pastoral ministry, as well as his appreciation for classic detective fiction, he created The Fr. Ryan Mysteries, a historical mystery series combining ingenious crimes, engaging characters, understated Irish humor, and a distinctive exploration of human nature. His storytelling reflects the influence of Agatha Christie and G. K. Chesterton while bringing an original perspective to the traditional mystery genre.

Dominic has been married to his wife Judith for 45 years. They have seven children and many grandchildren.
